

The evolution of tourism has increased the significance of English language. Some people believe that this will lead to English becoming the universal ^{most} spoken language legally. Although it has a major disadvantage, this essay will examine the main pros and cons of having a single language with logical conclusion.

The main advantages of having a single language rather than multiple native languages are ease of communication across different countries and ^{improved} inter-exchange relationships. Firstly, people would feel more comfortable while interacting with other countries and share their resources when there will be no language barrier. For instance, a person from India can migrate to Germany and well-versed with Germans easily if both of them speak a common language. Another advantage of an universal language is inter-exchange relationship. For example, foreign workers can be exchanged between countries which will automatically fill the skill gap among them. In short, speaking one language will make people lives convenient in dealing with others of different countries.

The main disadvantage of only language will result into loss of culture and their respective mother language. People will lose their legacy because of ~~and~~ impact on their mother tongue. Moreover, English can be a secondary language but cannot be a native one since it differentiate people based on their region and their culture. To illustrate if everyone would have a same language and culture then there is no point of travelling to different countries which will result tourism industry in danger.

Spiral

To recapitulate, however, rely on one language will definitely benefit the countries and boost their relationship, but it certainly have a negative impact on their culture and local language.