

Nowadays, many parents try to fulfil their kid needs whatever they want, which result them anything to do with complete freedom. This essay will discuss how this is not the right way to nurture children and how could it impact their teenage life along with logical conclusion.

To begin with, firstly, this is an inappropriate way of raising a kid as fulfilling all their expectations can maximize their demands. This means that parents are over-indulging their children making them buy whatever they need, even though it is overpriced or dangerous for them. For instance, as being habitual by such trend, one can sometime demand for ^{even} luxuries car despite knowing the fact that parents are from middle class background and cannot afford such expensive cars. Moreover, this habit will increase their desires consistently and to achieve them swiftly.

Not only this, while raising them like this, parenting can be considered harmful for children's in older ages which might lead family bore the consequences. For example children who are influenced by media can demand for dangerous objects like weapons or can be adamant about drinking liquor which is injurious to their health. Therefore, they can put others into danger through their actions like pointing a gun to someone heads due to anger can cause critical situation for them. Moreover, nurturing them this way will give children the 'complete' freedom to perform any action without knowing its limits. limits.

Date

To recapitulate, allowing children to do anything is necessary but to some extent only as they should be educated about their limits or by parents or guardians, otherwise this can result into disaster at some point later in age.