

Education plays an important role in preparing children for the modern world. Schools chopping off art and music from the curriculum so as to focus on useful subjects such as information technology is completely wrong. I believe art and music are very important subjects and this essay will emphasize upon this agreement.

Firstly, art and music are introduced during primary education where the child is required to inculcate and develop creativity. Researchers have proven this fact that the artistic side of a person should be identified in an early stage. Hence, ignorance will lead to oppression of talent at such a young age.

Secondly, since ancient times, music and art have played crucial role in the expression of feelings and emotions depicting day to day activities. This continues to exist even today. If creative art forms cease to exist this would lead to catastrophic changes in the society.

Lastly, as abstract and creative forms are very often supported and appreciated since ancient times, complete ignorance to art forms will deprive budding musicians and artist from their livelihood and the balance in the society will be disturbed.

In a nutshell, arts and other useful subjects are two sides of a coin. In order to make the coin moving, a proper balance should be necessary into the school curriculum. Short sighted changes without considering society as a whole would lead to 'mechanization' of the society and it will soon perish.
