

Writing Task 2-

Some people think that teenagers should concentrate on all subjects at school, others believe that teenagers should focus on the subject they are best at or they are most interested in. To what extent do you agree?

According to some people, attention should be paid to all subjects by teenagers at school. It is believed by other people that teenagers should lay more emphasis on the subject which they are the most or they feel more passionate about. In my opinion, preliminary level of knowledge of all subjects is beneficial. However, teenagers should allocate more time to the subject of their choice.

Every teenager should possess a basic understanding of all the subjects. Firstly, this knowledge will help them broadening their outlook. For instance, learning the principles of physics might not make someone a scientist but it will impart knowledge of logical thinking to a person. As a result, a person will be able to debunk superstitions and will not be tricked.

Secondly, if teenagers want to switch to any other domain in future, they can easily achieve it as they would have already received the prerequisites training.

On the other hand, teenagers feel more comfortable with the subjects they are interested in or good at.

Therefore, they are never stressed even when they are asked to gain profound insights in favourite subjects. Consequently they perform wonders in the fields of their choice. Furthermore, they grow at a stellar pace not only in the professional life but also in the personal life and leads their lives with sense of accomplishment.

To summarise, it is imperative that teenagers should follow the subjects they are enthusiastic about so that they can achieve incredible feats. At the same time, they should know the basic facts from all spheres of all life.
