Some people believe that one should possess more money and have less free time because it is better than having more free time and earning less money. In my opinion, it is more beneficial to spend a considerable amount of leisure time and get small salary because it leads to enhanced creativity, reduced mental stress and passing quality time with the family. On the other hand, huge amount of money can provide great opportunities for children's education, although lack of free time does not allow spending relaxed time with family.

In today's fast paced world, it is crucial to have some leisure time on regular basis. It is widely known that including free time in one's routine can lead to improved creative skills. In addition to this, giving your family dedicated time results in decreased hypertension and amelioration of mental health. because everyone feels relaxed and calm during this extra time. As a result of this, people feel more motivated and becomes more efficient.

One cannot deny the importance of having money these days. Abundance of wealth enables one to setup business which requires high initial investment, resulting in better growth prospect in future. Although money can help a person afford the best quality education for children, spending tension-free time with family is still difficult. due to paucity of time. Furthermore, excess of money allows a person to avoid insignificant tasks, which can be carried out by paid services, this provide an opportunity to deliver high priority tasks on time.

To sum up, I believe free time carry a great value as it can help in decline of mental strain and enabling a person to achieve tasks more efficiently. At the same time, the importance of money can not denied because it can provide a bright future for children and allows a person to concentrate on only crucial tasks.
