The fact is beyond doubt that the shopping as a leisure activity is becoming popular among society. It has various positive and negative effects on the lives of people which we are going to discuss.

Perhaps, the most positive impact of leisure shopping has been the growth of economy with increasing demand of goods. Demand of goods pushes the manufacturers to produce more and thus also create more jobs in any nation. Another positive seems to be innovation of products by their producers as people tend to consume more goods and services. This may lead to search of better products than they used before.

However, increasing demand of goods also leads to production of more household waste. This might result to have detrimental impact on the environment. In addition to this, some people may end up spending more money than they used to which may create financial constraints when buying other necessary goods. Lastly, leisure shopping can sometimes lead to neither away more productive hobbies such as reading, painting and exercising.

In Conclusion, it seems to me that leisure shopping can have many positive impacts on society and economy provided it is done keeping in mind our expense budget, time and waste management of older goods.
