

Nowadays, with increasing difficulty level of school academics, parents often hire private teachers to teach their children after school hours. In my opinion, it is a positive development for brighter future of their children.

The increasing world population has lead to increase in class strength for most of the schools. Teachers in such situation might not be able to pay individual attention to every child. Hence, some children are not able to understand the basic concepts of the subject. This can be problematic for them when they are trying to understand the advance concepts of the same subject. Private coaching can help them fill this knowledge gap especially for weaker students. In addition to this, private tuition provide employment opportunities for many teachers in the society. This would not just benefit the teachers but nation's economy as a whole.

Admittedly, only drawback of private coaching is their high cost. It might not be feasible for some parents to afford private tutors. This may lead their children to struggle more in studies. However, on a larger scale, it is mostly beneficial for the society considering its positives.

In conclusion, private tuition are positive development for most people in society considering the increasing number of children in school classrooms. It can be very beneficial in building strong academic foundation of any country.
