Make sure that you leave a blank line between the paragraphs.

- ‘there is a lack of ...’
- I don’t know if ‘freshly graduates’ is correct. I couldn’t find any sentence examples. ‘fresh graduates’ might be the only correct form.
- It is better to use a comma after ‘For example’ when it comes at the beginning of a sentence.
- ‘many universities who have tie-ups with...’
- When you use ‘disagree that...’, whatever comes after it is the thing that the subject of the sentences disagrees with.

Here’s a sentence from the New York Times

“Activists and some commissioners disagree that the weapons are needed.”

Your sentence in the essay with ‘disagree that’ (2nd body paragraph) seems to have made a mistake in this regard.

You could have said ‘Many people disagree by saying that one should be...’

- It is not entirely clear how the supporting sentences in the second body paragraph support the main point.
