

The bar graph provides information about amount of money spent on fast food items namely Fish and Chips, Hamburger and Pizza by three Income groups (High Income, Average Income and Low Income) in UK for the year 1990. The amount is indicated in million pounds.

Overall, Hamburger and Pizza were found high in high Income group, while Fish and Chips were popular in Low Income category.

High and Low Income category spent most of their money, nearly 44 million pounds and 33 million pounds on Hamburger. The figures showed high pizza rate about 19 million pounds in High Income, while Fish and Chips share found high in Average Income with 25 million pounds.

On the other hand, Low Income group spends more money nearly 17 million pounds on Fish and Chips. It's hamburger rate nearly 14 million pounds and pizza's rate about 7 million pounds found low among other groups. Both High and Low Income categories share equal amount nearly 17 million pounds on Fish and Chips.