

In the modern era, the time to get married and have children has drastically changed. There are many reasons for this like, career consciousness and the rational approach for financial stability. In my opinion, the disadvantages of such trend outweigh the advantages.

There are many reasons for this trend. To begin with firstly, the young generation has become more career minded that means they are giving more priority to their education and professional life. For example, in 2017 a survey was conducted, and it showed that the average young population takes time to get settle and have marriage at later stages of life. Secondly, the young couples want to explore their relationship before getting married, as it will be difficult after having babies. For instance, one of my friend got married at the age of 30, and he was in a relationship from five years, so they both decided to give time to their relationship to know each other well.

The disadvantages of such trend outweigh the advantages because firstly, when the adults decides to get married, and get settled at later stages of life, it results in generation gap. For example, one of my friend got married at the age of 30, and had baby at 34, so when his child was getting old he was not listening to them and not taking care of them. Secondly, when the couples decide to have wedlock in later stages of life, there are medical complications. For instance, in 2018 a survey was conducted, and it explained that the partners who had married in their late 30's were facing problems in having a baby.

To conclude, getting settled at later stages of life helps in building a beautiful career, but the disadvantages of it outweigh the advantages.
