Economic prosperity is government's main agenda, but other people think that other types of development are equally important for a nation.

In my opinion, both economic development and other measures play a vital role in the growth of the country.

Economic growth is important for a nation because, when the country has good economic progress, the GDP (growth domestic product) is increased. For example, in 2016 a survey was conducted, and it showed that India's GDP was increased twice as compared to previous year because economic activities were taking place at much higher rate. Secondly, when various tasks are going in profit making, then demand for more workforce gets increased, and resulting in increased employment rate.

On the other hand, other types of progress also play a vital role in the development of a nation because firstly, the growth of a nation can't be totally dependent on economic growth, other factors should have equal value. For example, the medical facilities should be highly updated, and there should be good medical infrastructure to keep the people of the country healthy. Secondly, the literacy rate of the country should be good, so that the citizens of the country have good moral values and are open minded.

For instance, in 2019 the literacy rate of India was 95%, and at that time the crime rate in the country was very less as compared to previous years.

In conclusion, economic development is important for a country, but the other types of progress should go side by side to make the country a better place to live.
