

Some citizens argue that weather disturbances have an appalling impact on business, while others argue that it gives more profits to different organizations. In my opinion, the change in the climate pattern has a bad effect on various commercial activities.

The sudden change in the ecosystem has led to effect various business models. Firstly, when there is heavy rainfall, it leads to landslides in the mountain areas, and due to which the road gets blocked. Hence, affecting the transportation. For instance, a company operating in Chandigarh city booked a parcel to be delivered from Shimla, but due to heavy landsliding the road got blocked, and delivery of the consignment was delayed by five hours, so due to which the production got halted for five hours. Secondly, due to the rapid change in the climate, it also affects people's health, and they get ill due to the sudden change in the weather conditions. For instance, as people get ill due to bad weather, they take leave from work, and it affects the working of the company. Thus, generating losses for the business.

People who think that ecosystem changes gives benefit to commercial trade think that because firstly, when there is a unexpected change in the meteorological conditions, it attracts more tourists in the country, as they want to see the beautiful weather, and it helps in getting more business to various business firms. For instance, in India there is a hill station called Shimla, and there people from other country visit everyday to see the changing weather. Thus, giving generating business for commercial activities. Secondly, the unbalanced weather also helps in increasing the production for the clothing industry, as due to unexpected change in climate, the demand for different types of clothing gets high. For example, in winter, changing weather conditions, people from Tibet come to India to sell their clothes at a very reasonable rate, and by selling they make huge amount of profits.

In conclusion, if the weather is changed at unexpected time, then it's good for various business organizations as they change accordingly, but the sudden change leads to affecting the trade firms.
