

Q

Many offenders commit more crimes after serving their first punishment. Why is this happening? What measures can be taken to solve this problem?

Ans

These criminals have the habit of repeating crime after serving their punishment. This essay will discuss the reasons for this kind of behaviour of lawbreaker, and also provide different solutions to this problem.

To begin with, the moral values given in the childhood days plays a very major role in the upbringing of a human being. As the criminals didn't studied well during their education days so they are totally dependent on criminal activities for their living. Thus, forcing them to indulge in bad activities to support their family financially. Secondly, as the gangsters don't have education, and no one is willing to give them jobs. Hence, for living and fulfilling their personal desires they do money extortion activities from people. For instance, in Chennai the money grabbing crime is the most common, as the literacy rate is very low there. These two factors play a major role in increasing crime incidences.

On the other hand, to solve these problems, there are a few possible solutions like, giving education to everyone, increasing the employment rate. Firstly, right to education is the individual right of every citizen of the country, and by providing free education to the weaker section people, the literacy rate can be increased. Therefore, by giving education to everyone, the crime rate will be decreased, and frequency of illegal activities will be reduced. Secondly, the government should take initiatives to provide employment to each and every citizen of the nation, so that they can earn money for living by working. Thus, by increasing the employment rate, less people will stay idle, and their minds will be busy in the work. Therefore, reducing the corruption rate in the country. These solutions will result in controlling the criminal cases in the nation.

In conclusion, the administration of the country should take different measures to reduce the crime rate, and also stop criminals to repeat their offence by counselling them. Thus, making a country a better place to live.
